In a recent conversation, Jeanene Stephens remembered an amazing bicycle trip with Linda Mills, their spouses and two other couples through the steep terrain of southern France. Over dinner each night, the group joked about their bruises, sore muscles and aching knees. It was on that trip that Linda discovered a lump—the first sign of the breast cancer that would take her down a much steeper path than anything these friends faced on that trip. Despite this unsettling discovery, Jeanene remembers a brave woman whose huge smile and sparkle in her eyes made her even more beautiful when she took off that itchy wig. Linda never let her illness dampen her zest for life or her desire to make it better for others.

When I hear the mix of joy and sadness in those reflections, I understand what has made Jeanene such an ardent supporter of the work that goes on at Carle. She’s not giving to a cause; she’s helping for a reason, and it’s making an impact on local patient care.

Since that fateful trip, Jeanene and her husband Rick have been involved in two major initiatives: the Stephens Family Clinical Research Institute, which helps fund the types of research that rapidly brings new innovations to our patients, and the Linda Morrison Mills Endowment. Nearly a dozen committed visionaries joined the Stephenses in supporting the Mills Endowment, raising $420,749 in just four months. That’s almost half of the total we hope to raise in support of clinical programs, medical education and other pressing needs for the Mills Breast Cancer Institute, and to honor the vision of the woman who turned her darkest hour into a shining light of hope.

In the following pages, you’ll meet others like Jeanene who have found their reason and made an impact, funding a long list of vital patient initiatives at Carle. To them and to all those who make innovative medicine and compassionate care a reality for our patients every day, thanks for your amazing support.

Sincerely,
Beth Katsinas, Vice President

A Tale of Two Friends

Remembering a friend whose legacy gives hope to thousands.

Last year, we received $4.3 million from 3,765 donors through annual gifts, pledges, corporate sponsorships and estate plans. Those numbers only tell half the story, because the “why” behind the gift is just as amazing as the “what.” Some gave to ensure the Guest House continues to be an inviting place for families of critically ill patients. Others gave to help those with severe hearing loss find the tools they need to thrive. But they all made a difference, creating a million moments of transformational care for the 1.5 million people we serve.
Moments of rest.

Each year, annual gifts of time and money make a substantial impact on patient care. In 2018, 3,726 donors provided more than $1.23 million in annual financial support, while more than 1,700 caring volunteers donated 100,000 hours of their time. At the Carle Auxiliary Guest House, which relies solely on charitable dollars to cover its operational costs, those gifts provide an oasis of comfort for families of critical care patients. And that’s just one of more than 100 programs supported through annual gifts. Now, you can make a difference through regular monthly giving with a simple click. ANNUAL GIVING
Carle Auxiliary Guest House

Bringing TLC to families of the ICU

Guest House marks milestone with a major renovation.

In 2003, the Carle Auxiliary Guest House opened its doors, becoming a haven for families of critically ill patients from out of town by providing a hot shower, a soft bed and everything else you’d expect from a cozy inn – except for a bill in the morning. To Carle nurse Drew Jones, the Guest House is more than a convenience; it’s part of the Carle mission to provide compassionate care.

You never know what circumstances will bring someone to the emergency room. “We’ve had a few from out of state. We have some that are just driving down from Chicago and end up having an accident,” says Jones. “They’re trying to get back home with their loved one, but they need a place to stay. It’s really a nice benefit to say, ‘You can stay here for free.’”

Jones receives a lot of great feedback from guests who use the house, even if he has a hard time convincing them it’s okay to take a breather from a patient who needs their care. “I have to tell them that that’s why we’re here. We have the respiratory care. We’ve got the techs. We’ve got the doctors. Everybody’s here watching over the patient. So you can take a break.”

Jones is no stranger to the Guest House; he was there for the opening tour, along with hundreds of other Carle employees who dutifully donned blue booties to keep the home pristine for its first guests. Since then, the Guest House has welcomed over 30,000 family members from 48 states and 18 different countries. But with all that use, it was starting to show some age - that’s why Carle Center for Philanthropy made it the central focus of the 2018 employee giving campaign.

More than 2,000 Carle and Health Alliance employees contributed over $385,000 to celebrate the 15th anniversary of the Guest House and provide much needed updates. Jones was one of those who gave, joining a record number of donors to make the renovations possible.

“We’re a giving bunch,” says Jones, adding that the many benefits he enjoys as a Carle employee make it easy to give back. However, employees weren’t the only ones who gave. When the Auxiliary heard about the gift, they gave an additional $11,115 to the cause, helping ensure that the Guest House will be around to serve patients for many years to come.

Moments of rest.

Despite a cancelled event, corporate donors still give.

Take a large golf event: add 80 corporate sponsors, toss in nearly 3.5 inches of rain and you have what should be the recipe for the perfect storm. When the remnants of Tropical Storm Gordon forced the cancellation of the 2018 Carle Golf Open before it even began, we braced for the worst. But what we saw was the best – a long list of companies whose incredible generosity was a match for any storm.

"Not a club was swung," says Lesa Brandt, annual fund manager for Carle Center of Philanthropy, "and yet not a single corporate sponsor asked for their money back." Brandt says that speaks volumes not only about the companies Carle works with, but also the value they place on the Carle mission.

"Carle is really focused on growth and expanding their services, and along with that comes a higher level of care," says Fred Berglund, president of Berglund Construction, a fourth-generation, family-owned firm that helped build Carle at The Fields and the new Champaign Surgery Center. "I think it’s Carle’s investment in world-class service and serving the medical needs of the community that really caught our eye and why we really love being a partner."

Despite being cancelled, the “open that never opened” raised more than $300,000 to support a number of Carle projects, including the Small Baby Unit (SBU) of Carle’s Neonatal Intensive Care Unit. This highly specialized unit is one of only 20 in the country dedicated to advanced care for babies born under 30-weeks’ gestation. Because too much stimulation can impede brain development in newborns this small, the SBU provides six beds in a special area designed to limit sound and light. Proceeds from the open will purchase new sound monitoring technology to further enhance their care.

"That population of children is near and dear to me personally, and to the company as a whole," explains Berglund. "I've had the opportunity to see up close what first-class treatment can do," says Berglund, who sees that same dedication to exceptional care reflected at Carle. "The proof is right there," says Berglund. "You can see before your eyes what Carle is doing with these investments."

Moments of kindness.

Last year, corporate sponsorships hit a record high thanks to two fundraising events – Carle Golf Open and INSYNC. Together, these events drew support from more than 100 businesses and corporations who helped us raise nearly $350,000. While they may not have played a hole or braved the stage to lip-sync the latest pop hits, the kindness and generosity of these sponsors helped us transform healthcare for the women and children we serve. From child friendly waiting rooms to backpacks for young surgery patients, their generous support created a million moments of kindness.
“Give Until It Feels Good!”

Turning birthday wishes into better patient care.

You might say her family bleeds orange and blue. “My deceased husband, my two kids, my granddaughter, my father and my current husband are all U of I grads,” says Susan Bates, who is also a proud alum. This is why she recently made a large financial gift that will benefit research through a unique collaboration between Carle and the University of Illinois.

Bates already knows what that collaboration looks like. For four years, she served as a program coordinator for continuing medical education at the U of I College of Medicine, where she worked with many Carle physicians who served as department heads. Prior to that, she worked for 12 years for the St. Louis District Dairy Council, rising from home economist in the Champaign office, to Illinois chairman and then program coordinator, where she would supervise offices across Missouri and Illinois. “My husband had Parkinson’s for 20 years, and when I was commuting to St. Louis that became too much.” So, she accepted the U of I position, which kept her closer to home.

When the Carle Illinois College of Medicine was announced, she was intrigued by the new collaboration and its potential to shape the future of healthcare. But it was actually a chance meeting with a well-known local athlete that helped inspire her to make her gift.

As a U of I Alumni Association volunteer, Bates served on a committee with Jean Driscoll, an American wheelchair racer who won her division of the Boston Marathon an astounding eight times. “She wrote a book called ‘Dream Big, Work Hard,’” says Bates. “And in my autographed copy, she urged me to dream big.” And so, she decided to dream a little bigger on her giving.

In 2018, Bates celebrated a “notable birthday” with a charitable gift annuity that benefits the new college, as well as the Stephens Family Clinical Research Institute, which provides seed grants for research and encourages physicians to explore stubborn problems. “I think the vision that Carle and the university have is just fantastic and has great promise for the future.”

Moments of gratitude.

In 2018, we were grateful to receive nearly $575,000 in gifts totaling $10,000 or more. We put these major gifts to good use: taking world-class care to new moms and babies in underserved neighborhoods, helping nurses pursue degrees that lead to a higher level of care, and upgrading facilities for our patients and guests. That’s just a small list of the big impact these dollars have made – providing transformational care for all the communities we serve.

Like others, she hopes her investment will yield many exciting advances in therapies and treatments benefiting patients for generations to come. It’s a choice that her generous parents would have no doubt heartily endorsed. “My father would always say, ‘Don’t give until it hurts. Give until it feels good!’” And for Bates, this one feels really good.
ESTATE GIVING
Carle Auditory Oral School

Planting Seeds for the Future

How one gift turned three farms into a legacy of care.

Her great-grandfather was the first to invest in a farm. Followed by her grandmother. And her mother. For four generations, the rich Illinois soil provided a reliable source of income for Sherleen Scheibly’s family. And now, thanks to an estate gift to Carle Center for Philanthropy, it’ll provide compassionate medical care for generations to come.

When Mrs. Scheibly joined Carle as a nurse anesthetist (CRNA) in 1956, there were just 24 doctors, including Dr. Rogers – one of the hospital’s original founders. “Everybody treated me awfully well from the beginning,” says Mrs. Scheibly, adding that many offered to help with her daughter who had pressing medical needs. Doctors she didn’t even know yet would stop her in the hall and offer to help. It was a gesture of kindness she never forgot.

For 39 years, she worked at Carle and participated in many interesting surgeries, including the first cochlear implant in Illinois in 1984. That milestone event eventually led to the creation of the Carle Auditory Oral School, where Mrs. Scheibly later watched young graduates with profound hearing loss move boldly into their future thanks to the life-changing device. “The younger they are, the more it helps them,” says Mrs. Scheibly. “It’s just a unique and wonderful thing.” She became a major donor when the school moved to a new building in 2008 – so it only makes sense that part of her latest gift would support the school’s greatest need, helping it grow and expand to serve even more families.

In addition to the school, her gift will also benefit Healthy Beginnings - a community outreach program that helps new mothers and their babies during their early development stages. As a mother of three, including one who had significant care needs early in her life, she understands the struggle, which is only made harder by financial need. “There’s a lot of people who can’t afford to even get on a bus and go to Carle, let alone pay for their care,” says Mrs. Scheibly, who hopes her gift will make a difference. The remainder of her gift will benefit the Carle Illinois College of Medicine.

Mrs. Scheibly has a long history of supporting care at Carle, both as a member of the Circle of Friends and founding member of the Women’s Legacy Circle. For the former nurse and longtime Carle philanthropist, an estate gift provided the perfect way to honor her past, improve the present and invest in better care for tomorrow.

Moments of hope.

When someone makes Carle a part of their legacy, they become a member of the Margaret Carle Morris Society. This prestigious society is a time-honored tradition of planned giving that keeps Carle strong. Last year, deferred gifts of more than $2.3 million were realized or confirmed by these amazing individuals representing a broad spectrum of retired physicians and nurses, volunteers and other community members committed to enhancing the care we provide. Their generous gifts will make a difference, ensuring that innovative medicine and compassionate care are always the hallmarks of excellence at Carle.
Endowments
ENSURING MEDICAL EXCELLENCE FOR FUTURE GENERATIONS

Carle Center for Philanthropy manages 25 endowments that produce earnings to support the Carle mission of serving people through high-quality care, medical research and education.

At the close of 2018, the value of Carle’s endowed funds totaled $2,695,306 providing $895,672 to be spent for donor-specified purposes or reinvested to grow the endowed fund. We’re grateful to the many donors who’ve established an endowment fund at Carle.

BROADRICK-ALLEN—Supports annual recognition awards for a caregiver at the Windsor of Savoy, a Hospice staff member and a Hospice volunteer.

Phillip & Carol BLANKENBURG—Supports cancer research within the Stephens Family Institute for Clinical Research.

Thomas E. BUETOW Memorial—Provides partial support for students attending conferences related to their studies. Graduate students in the UIUC Schools of Molecular and Cellular Biology and Integrative Biology as well as medical students in the Carle Illinois College of Medicine are eligible.

CARDIOVASCULAR Staff Service Excellence Awards—Provides annual excellence awards to exemplary nurses and/or staff in the Cardiovascular Intensive Care Unit and Cardiovascular Surgery areas.

COMMUNITY Parish Nurse—Supports the operating costs of the Community Parish Nurse Program.

DICKINSON Geriatrics Scholarship—Provides funding for a third-year resident in the Internal Medicine or Family Medicine Residency Program to attend a national conference related to geriatrics.

ERICKSON Alzheimer’s—Supports in-home occupational therapy services for patients with Alzheimer’s and other dementias. To assist uninsured and underinsured patients, funds can be used to pay for therapy home visits as well as assistive medical devices recommended by the therapist.

Edward and Tressa GIBALA and Family—Supports projects aligned with the Carle strategic plan. Funds may support clinical programs, patient/family experience, medical research and education, and equipment and facilities.

Dr. Joan GOOD ERICKSON—Provides support for a speech pathologist and/or speech student to travel with medical mission trips, which are supported by the William S. Johnson Fund.

GUEST House—Supports the ongoing expenses of the Carle Auxiliary Guest House, including but not limited to annual operating costs and capital expenditures.

Edward and Mary HAYS Family—Supports scholarships for Carle nurses pursuing a bachelor’s degree in nursing through an accredited nursing program at an Illinois public university.

HOYNE Geriatrics—Benefits geriatric patients in the areas of research, patient/staff education and patient care.

Christine and Tony JOHNSTON Guest House—Provides support for Carle Auxiliary Guest House operational costs.

Robin C. LEONARD Guest House—Supports needs of the Carle Auxiliary Guest House not related to general operating expenses such as salaries and utilities.

Dr. John MASON Family—Supports scholarships for Carle Obstetrics nurses pursuing a bachelor’s degree.

Douglas and Bridget MILLER Memorial—Supports cancer research, scholarships for oncology nurses pursuing a BSN or MSN degree, and continuing education for Oncology staff.

George A. MILLER Radiology—Supports education and training of Carle radiology technicians and radiology nurses with priority given to the technicians.

Linda Morrison MILLS—Provides critical support of the greatest needs at Mills Breast Cancer Institute.

MUSSEY Physician Alumni—Supports projects aligned with the Carle strategic plan. Funds may support clinical programs, patient/family experience, medical research and education, and equipment and facilities.

ROSS Family Surgical Education—Supports education and training of surgical staff with priority given to those in the main operating room. Other perioperative services staff may apply for funding if available.

Fay and Anne SIMS Cancer—Supports cancer research, education of cancer patients and staff, and cancer patient care.

Dr. R. Merle STAUFFER—Supports projects aligned with the Carle strategic plan. Funds may support clinical programs, patient/family experience, medical research and education, and equipment and facilities.

THOMAS Cancer—Supports medical research related to oncology.

Lucille and Charles WERT—Supports continuing education for nurses and other professional staff of Carle Foundation Hospital.

HOW AN ENDOWMENT WORKS

An endowment is a long-term source of funding for Carle and can be created through an outright gift, a bequest in a will, or a life income gift such as a charitable gift annuity or a charitable remainder trust. You may contribute at any level to an established endowment or create a named endowment with a minimum gift of $25,000. Creating an endowed fund gives you an opportunity to put your name, or the name of another person or organization, on a fund for a cause meaningful to you. To learn more, contact Carle Center for Philanthropy.
Charitable Giving

January 1 - December 31, 2018

Each year, you help enhance the world-class healthcare provided by Carle through charitable giving. From January 1 - December 31, 2018, our generous donors contributed $4,385,839 in new gifts and pledges. The total amount of restricted and unrestricted funds maintained and managed by Carle Center for Philanthropy at the close of 2018 were $27,485,225. From this strong base, we were able to distribute charitable dollars totaling more than $2.6 million.
